

Consultant profile

Stephen Putman

Detective, strategy manager, author, lecturer, consultant.

Stephen Putman was a senior detective police officer. His training and experience includes all aspect of policing. He is an accomplished manager of people, projects and operations with proven success in law enforcement both within the UK and overseas.

Stephen has consulted extensively for the UK police in Europe, Africa, Australia and the Caribbean. He speaks regularly at international law-enforcement conferences.

As well as extensive operational experience in general policing he has specialist knowledge in: financial investigation, intelligence gathering, risk management, control of informants and provision of protection in threat to life cases.

As a Detective Superintendent at New Scotland Yard Stephen headed of a number of special and sensitive operational units. He was a senior manager in the SOCA national law enforcement agency and in the newly formed National Crime Agency. He devised both strategy and the tactical delivery of discrete risk management in threat to life cases working closely with other agencies in the UK and overseas.

Stephen is skilled risk assessment and management, policing across cultures, bespoke officer training, team building and dynamic leadership. He now consults for Oroza in the area of law enforcement.